CARNOT A MARTYR

DEATH SPEEDILY FOLLOWS.

Stabbed While Acknowledging the Plaudits of a Multitude.

HIS ASSAILANT CAUGHT AT ONCE.

It Required the United Efforts of the Police and Mounted Guards to Prevent the Loyal Populace of Lyons from Wreaking Summary Vengeance on the Cowardly Murderer—Scenes of Excitement and Sadness at the Grand Theater, Where a Gala Performance Was to be Given on Account of the President's Presence—The Assassin a Young Italian. Sketch of M. Carnot's Career.

LYONS, June 25.—The most intense excitement has been caused everywhere in France by the assassination of President Carnot. To describe the excitement in this city would be almost impossible. The president was visiting Lyons in connection with the international exhibition. Upon his arrival here he was tendered a reception at the prefecture, after which he visited the exhibition. After spending some time at the exhibition he proceeded to the Palais de Commerce, where a banquet was given in his honor.

At 9:25 o'clock last night President Carnot started for the theater, where a gala performance was to be given because of his presence in the city. Several carriages were in the procession, the first one being occupied by the president. M. Carnot's carriage was driven slowly along in front of the Palais de Commerce, and then turned into Rue de la Republique, still following the facade of the palace. When half way down the street, which was lined with enthusiastic crowds of people who were loudly cheering, a man rushed out of the crowd and sprang upon the step of the president's landau.

THE LATE PRESIDENT CARNOT.

Stabbed While Saluting Admirers.

Just at this moment M. Carnot was waving his right hand and saluting with his hat in his left hand in response to the ovation that was being given to him by the crowd. The people close to the carriage saw that the man standing on the step had a knife in his hand. By the glare of the electric light they saw the bright blade gleam in the air as the assassin's arm descended, and then President Carnot was seen to fall back in his seat, his face deathly pale. One of his hands was crossed over his heart, where the steel had entered his body.

M. Rivaud, prefect of Lyons, who was seated beside M. Carnot, immediately struck the assassin a blow full in the face and knocked him from the step, thus preventing the man from again stabbing the president, which it was his evident intention to do.

Instantly cries of "Le presidentest assassine!" "Mort a la assassin!" were heard on every side, and the crowd in the vicinity of the carriage swelled to enormous proportions, every member in it seemingly intent upon killing the assassin. He was grasped by a dozen hands, and his life would have then and there paid the forfeit of his crime had it not been for several sergeants de ville, who seized him and attempted to draw him away from his captors. This was found to be impossible, as the infuriated populace seemed determined to lynch the man, and the efforts of the sergeants availed nothing beyond saving the man from instant death. Blows were aimed at his face and head over the shoulders of the police, who had by this time received reinforcements, and many of the blows landed fairly. At last the police succeeded in driving the howling mob back a foot or so from their prisoner, but to get the captive through the crowd was practically impossible.

The Assassin Saved by Troops.

In the meantime the news of the assassination had spread with lightning like rapidity, and mounted guards were sent to the aid of the policemen, who were still struggling to preserve the life of the assassin. With drawn sabers in their hands the guards rode down into the swirling crowd, heedless of whom their horses trampled upon. The crowd slowly gave way before the horses, and at last the center of the mob was reached. Then a cordon was formed around the ten almost exhausted policemen and their captive, and the march to the police station began.

Even thus surrounded the prisoner was not safe, for men in the crowd made frantic endeavors to reach him. The guards repelled these repeated attacks with the flat sides of their swords, while at the same time keeping watchful eyes upon the crowd to prevent the prisoner from being shot. Maledictions were hurled upon the captive, and never before has such a wild indignation against a human being been seen in this city.

In the meantime physicians were hastily summoned to attend the president, who had almost immediately been conveyed to the prefecture. A careful examination was made of the wound, and the doctors declared that the condition of M. Carnot was hopeless.

The receipt of the news of the assassination caused a great sensation at the Grand theater, which was filled to the walls by the elite of Lyons. The theater presented a brilliant scene, the handsome toilettes being offset by the gay uniforms of the many military officers present. All were waiting with impatience the arrival of the president, and all were unable to understand the delay. Suddenly a man entered the theater, crying at the top of his voice, "The president has been assassinated!"

Excitement at the Grand Theater.

The most intense excitement followed this abrupt announcement. Women screamed and several fainted. Many men, without waiting to secure their hats, ran out of the building to confirm the news. They found all the streets leading to the palace filled with excited throngs, and in a few minutes they were convinced that the report was true. Suddenly through the throng sped a landau conveying Adrien Dupuy, a brother of Prime Minister Dupuy; Deputy Chaudey and Prefect Rivaud, the crowd falling away before it, as it dashed into the Rue de la Republique, preceded by four mounted gendarmes. The crowd, thinking now that the report of the assassination was untrue, and that the president was in the carriage, shouted "Vive Carnot!" "Vive la Republique!"

The carriage was stopped and MM. Chaudey and Rivaud, in tremulous voices, said: "Don't shout! The president has been the victim of an outrage."

The cheers were instantly turned to curses, and many and loud were the cries for vengeance.

Announcing the Tragic News.

The landau proceeded to the theater, where MM. Rivaud and Chaudey went to the president's box. As soon as they were seen the whole audience rose, and amid profound silence M. Rivaud said, in a broken voice, with sobs: "The president has just been assassinated."

This announcement was received with a terrible explosion of fury, as the audience, when the first report of the assassination was received, had, though greatly excited, generally discredited it. The theater resounded with shouts of "A mort a la assassin" and cries for vengeance upon him.

When silence was in a measure restored M. Rivaud continued:

"In the Rue de la Republique a miscreant, under pretext of presenting a petition, stabbed M. Carnot with a dagger."

M. Rivaud was again interrupted with shouts of "Death to the murderer!" "Revenge!" "Revenge!"

Waving his hand for silence M. Rivaud again spoke, saying:

"Do not make my mission more painful. We left M. Carnot in the hands of doctors. You understand that under these conditions our hearts are filled with sorrow and that the proposed performance in the president's honor cannot take place."

The audience then left, many of them proceeding at once to the prefecture, where they stood in the streets waiting for any report that might be vouchsafed them from the building and discussing among themselves the horrible crime that they considered had cast disgrace upon the fair fame of their city.

An official note was issued this morning calling upon the senate and chamber of deputies to assemble in congress at Versailles at 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of electing a new president.

The Dying President.

After examining the president's wound all the physicians in attendance upon him agreed that an operation was necessary, whereupon Dr. Ollier immediately probed the wound. While this was being done M. Carnot came to his senses, and said feebly, but distinctly, "How you are hurting me."

The doctors, however, continued to attend the wound, the outward bleeding of which had stopped. They knew, though, that the president's condition was extremely grave, as they more than suspected that internal hemorrhages had commenced.

After M. Carnot had been taken from his carriage and placed upon a bed in the prefecture nobody but the doctors and the officers of his military household who had accompanied him to Lyons were allowed to enter the room to which he had been carried.

Despite all that medical skill could do the dying man sank rapidly, and at 12:45 this morning he breathed his last. Immediately after the death of M. Carnot Prime Minister Dupuy started on his return to Paris to officially announce the news to the senate and the chamber of deputies.

Shortly after midnight the archbishop of Lyons was summoned to the bedside of the dying president to administer to him the last rites of the church. M. Carnot remained conscious to the last. He realized that his life was rapidly ebbing, and twice he said: "Je m'en vais" (I am going away).

Dr. Ponce leaned over the bed on which the president was lying, and said to him: "Your friends are here, Monsieur le President."

M. Carnot replied: "I am grateful for their presence," and in less than a minute gasped for breath, there was a convulsive shuddering of his body, and the president of France was dead.

The Youthful Assassin.

Santo, the assassin, is a beardless young man, 20 or 25 years old. When arrested he was attired in a brown suit, and wore a peaked cap that matched the suit in color. As he marched under his police guard from the Rue de la Republique to the station he held his head down, but his eyes glanced furtively around as though he was seeking an opportunity to escape from his captors. To have made such an attempt, however, would have been the height of foolhardiness, unless he desired to commit suicide, for there is not the slightest doubt that had he got away from the protection afforded him by the police he would have been torn limb from limb.

Santo, who speaks French badly, when questioned by Prefect Lepine at the police station, said he had lived at Cette, department of Herault, for the past six months, and had only come to Lyons yesterday. He gave his age as 22 years. His replies were given coolly, but without any sign of bravado. He refused, however, to answer any of the many questions put to him regarding his motive for stabbing the president, declaring that on this subject he would speak only before a tribunal. When he was searched by the police a book was found in one of his pockets, in which it was written that he had been born in a village in the province of Milan, Italy.

After M. Carnot had been taken to the prefecture it became generally known that his assassin was an Italian, and the feeling of deep indignation among the crowd found vent in the form of attacks upon cafes kept by inoffensive natives of Italy. Three such places in the vicinity of the Palais de Commerce were totally wrecked by the infuriated mob. There is no doubt that the Italian consulate would have been sacked had it not been for the prompt action of the police, who stopped the crowd and compelled its members to disperse. The excitement continues at fever heat and it would take very little to precipitate anti-Italian riots. All over threats are made to take summary vengeance upon the countrymen of Santo.

PRESIDENT CARNOT'S CAREER.

From His First Public Service He Was an Ardent Republican.

Marie Francois Sadi-Carnot, fourth president of the French republic, was born at Limoges, France, Aug. 11, 1837. He was the eldest son of the ex-Minister Hippolyte Sadi-Carnot of 1848 who died in 1888 and was the grandson of Sazare Carnot, known as the "Organizer of Victory."

The late president was an engineer by profession, and entered the Ecole Polytechnique in 1857. After the revolution of Sept 4 Sadi-Carnot was charged, as commissary extraordinary of the provisional government, to organize the national defense in the three departments of the Seine-Inferieure, the Eure, and Calvados, and was appointed Jan 10, 1871, prefect of the department of the Seine-Inferieure. He was elected representative from the Cote-d'Or to the national assembly on Feb 8 following, and took his seat with the left, and had himself inscribed as a member of the party known as the Republican Left, of which section he became secretary, and voted for all the measures which tended towards the definite establishment of the republic.

Sadi-Carnot presented himself at the general elections of Feb. 20, 1876, as a candidate for the chamber of deputies in the Second division or circonscription of the arrondissement of the Beaume, and was elected by 7,058 votes, against about 5,700 votes cast for his two opponents. He followed the same political course in the new chamber, of which he was elected secretary, and, after the act of May 16, 1877, he formed part of the 363 deputies of the United Left, who refused a vote of confidence in the Broglie ministry. In the election of Oct. 14, 1877, Sadi-Carnot was re-elected in the same circonscription by 7,584 votes, against 5,324 obtained by the official candidate, M. Bedoit Champy, Jr.

A decreee of Aug. 28, 1878, appointed Sadi-Carnot as under secretary of state of the ministry of public works in the Dufaure ministry of President McMahon, and retained this position under Premiers Waddington and M. Varroy in M. Jules Grevy's presidency.

Subsequently he was minister of public works and then minister of finance in President Ferry's cabinet. In 1887, when President Grevy was forced out of power, M. Carnot was put forward as a candidate for the succession, and on the second ballot M. Carnot was elected president by 616 votes against 188 cast for General Saussier and 25 votes scattered among other candidates. It is generally believed that he would have been re-elected had he so desired.

The prominent part which President Carnot took in bringing about the so-called Franco-Russian entente, the visit of the French fleet to Cronstadt, in 1891, later its visit to Portsmouth, and the visit of the Russian squadron to Toulon last year, with the accompanying Franco-Russian fetes, are matters of so recent occurrence as not to require any further mention at this time. In a word, President Carnot tried his utmost to do his duty, and he will be remembered as an honest and fearless president.

A president of France is elected for seven years by a majority of votes by the senate and chamber of deputies, united in a national assembly or electoral congress. President Carnot came into power on Jan 1, 1888, and would, in the natural order of things, have retired on Jan 1, 1895.

M. Casimir-Perier is probably the strongest candidate for the presidency, as he seems to be the most powerful man in France at present. Firm, fearless and alert, the ex-premier was looked upon as likely to succeed M. Carnot, and it will be recalled that his recent "fall" from the premiership was looked upon as nothing more than a political move, calculated to strengthen his political chances.

MINE HORROR IN WALES

Terrible Results of an Explosion of Fire Damp.

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY KILLED.

Of Two Hundred and Sixty-seven at Work in the Mine Only Seventeen Escaped Alive—The Bodies of the Dead Terribly Mutilated.

PONT-Y-PRIDD, Wales, June 25.—A terrible explosion of fire damp occurred Saturday afternoon in the Albion colliery, at Gilfynnd, near this place. The force of the explosion may be judged from the fact that a beam fifteen inches by fifteen inches and twenty feet long was blown to a considerable distance from the top of the shaft.

Late last evening the rescuing parties succeeded in extricating a large number of bodies, all of which were sent to the surface. Thus far 142 bodies have been taken from the pit.

It has been ascertained that 267 men and boys descended the shaft on Saturday, and of this number only seventeen have been saved. A large number of bodies were buried beneath the earth. Those not killed by the explosion or crushed to death by the falling earth and rock were undoubtedly asphyxiated by the after damp. The bodies of those recovered, who were killed by the actual explosion, which was terrific, were terribly mutilated. In many cases arms and legs were blown completely from the trunks. Limbs from missing bodies have been found in several parts of the mine. In one place a dozen bodies were found together. The men had evidently been overtaken by the after damp while endeavoring to make their escape.

A telegram was yesterday received from the queen. Her majesty said she was much shocked by the news of the sad disaster, and she expressed her deep sympathy with the families of those who lost their lives. The dispatch adds that the queen awaits with anxiety the results of the brave efforts of the rescuing party.

Bayoneted a Woman.

ADRIAN, Pa., June 25.—A serious riot occurred here last night. L. W. Robinson, superintendent of the Rochester and Pittsburg company, and Sheriff Gourley were stoned, while a Polish woman was bayoneted by a soldier. The sheriff was cut over the eye with a rock and struck with a club on the back. Mr. Robinson has an ugly cut on the chin, but otherwise he is not badly hurt. The Polish woman was the most seriously injured, but it is reported that she will recover. Robinson and Sheriff Gourley brought a carload of special police. The miners thought they were "non-union" men, and the women stoned the train, being urged on by the men.

Domino and Grady Beaten.

CHICAGO, June 25.—The great American Derby was won Saturday by Rey El Santa Anita, the son of Cheviot. Domino, the hitherto unconquered son of Himyar, ran last in a field of nine starters, played out. Senator Grady, Marcus Daly's colt, finished second, with considerable in him to spare at the close. Domino at no time was better than fourth after the first half mile. Taral pulled him up hard at the close, when it became apparent that the colt was done for. In the pools the winner sold at 40 to 1.

The BREATH of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis, which is usually the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results by its use for years past, properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only cure. Call upon your druggist for it.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS.

Again Senators Predict the Passage of the Tariff Bill "This Week."

WASHINGTON, June 25.—There is little doubt in any quarter that the present week will see the end of the tariff debate in the senate. Estimates as to the time when the final vote shall be reached range from Tuesday until Saturday, but a majority of the senators express the opinion that the final vote will be taken on Wednesday or Thursday. Senator Harris, however, still thinks it possible to conclude the work on the bill by tomorrow night. To accomplish this, however, means very rapid work, comparatively few speeches and the possible postponement of important items, such as reciprocity, until the conference report shall be made. Senator Allison expresses the opinion that the senate will not dispose of the bill in the committee of the whole before Tuesday night, and that the four remaining days of the week will be necessary to finish the work on the bill in the senate.

The more important questions yet to be disposed of in committee are: The remainder of the income tax, the whisky and spirit tax, the tobacco tax, Senator Teller's retaliation on diamond amendment, the spun silk question, which was passed over when the silk schedule was under consideration, and the reciprocity, if it be not postponed, and in the senate sugar and wool as well as others.

If the final vote on the tariff bill is reached before Saturday the appropriation bills which have been reported will be immediately taken up, but in what order has not yet been determined.

Railway pooling is expected to be the main subject of discussion before the house this week, with the admission of New Mexico to statehood and the taxation of greenbacks as incidental questions.

THE STRIKERS AT WALSTON

They Succeed in Persuading New Men to Refuse Work.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., June 25.—The striking miners at Walston checkmated yesterday a movement on the part of the Rochester and Pittsburg Coal and Iron company. Fifty new miners, with a squadron of coal and iron police, arrived at the mines. It was only a few minutes until every stranger had been buttonholed by the strikers, who led them off. The situation was explained, and the new men have decided not to work. There are miners here who say they are ready and willing to go back to work, but are afraid. About fifty more coal and iron police arrived last evening for duty at Walston.

The camp of the Fifth and Sixteenth regiments were visited by hundreds of people yesterday. The boys are complaining bitterly because they think they are not needed. Two members of the Bellefonte company are under arrest charged with assault and battery upon a Punxsutawney citizen. The fight occurred late Saturday night, and one of the guards ran his bayonet through the citizen's lip. The Berwind-White company shipped in a hundred more new miners and a lot more deputies yesterday.

Cruiser New York Home Again.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The cruiser New York passed in by Sandy Hood early yesterday morning, and at 8 o'clock dropped anchor off Tompkinsville, S. I. Soon after Captain Phillips and some of the other officers came to the city to visit their families and friends. The ship shows some signs of the work of the winds and waves upon her on her way up from Jamaica, after service at Rio Janeiro and Bluefields, but every part of her complex machinery is in excellent condition, and all her men are well.

Dr. Kremien Convicted.

BALTIMORE, June 25.—The jury in the case of the state vs. Dr. John Kremien for the murder by poison of his patient, John Forre, as he was known in Baltimore, but whose right name was Herman Hanbuch, returned a verdict finding the prisoner guilty of manslaughter. It was originally alleged that the doctor killed Hanbuch to get his estate of $6,700, forged a will to carry out the scheme, and also poisoned a witness of the will.

Murder in the Second Degree.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., June 25.—A jury convicted W. J. McCormick of murder in the second degree. The case was the outcome of a boisterous and drunken quarrel between McCormick and Joseph Bender, in a barroom at Altoona, over the ownership of a glass of beer. Bender took the beer, but his skull was subsequently fractured by a brick thrown by McCormick.

Strengthening the Philadelphia Team.

BALTIMORE, June 25.—Pitcher Taylor, of the Philadelphia ball club, who was overcome by the heat in Saturday's game, is reported much better. Manager Irwin left for Harrisburg to sign Pitcher Meaney and take him west to join the team. The Philadelphia club has come to an agreement with Washington for the services of Short Stop Joe Sullivan.

Commonwealers Sent Up.

DENVER, June 25.—The trial of seventy-three Commonwealers at Julesburg on the charge of seizing a Union Pacific engine was concluded in the United States court. Judge Hallet sent Edward Ugurbil to Pueblo for four months and six others to the Arapahoe jail for thirty days. Two men were discharged.

Wants to Prevent Teachers Dancing.

SHARON, Pa., June 25.—County School Superintendent Eckels has sent a circular to the Mercer county school boards asking them to act on the question of teachers attending "ungodly dances." Eckels wants them to be prevented from dancing. He claims that in dancing the teachers set a bad example to their pupils.

FISHERMEN DROWNED.

TWENTY-FOUR LIVES SACRIFICED.

The Tug James D. Nichols, Overcrowded with Passengers, Goes to the Bottom Four Miles from Scotland Lightship. Only Fifty-four Rescued.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The tug James D. Nichol, with sixty-three excursionists and a crew numbering twelve, sank at about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon some three miles off the Highlands. Fifty-four of those on board have been accounted for. The rest were probably drowned.

The tug left Fifth street and the East river at 7:30 a. m., touched at Pier 3, East river, and then went on to the fishing grounds. She had, it is said, a license to carry fifty passengers, but sixty-three tickets were sold. There was a bar and a lunch counter on board, where attendants, with the crew, brought the whole number on board up to about seventy-five.

The tug reached the banks on time, but the fishing was poor and the sea too rough for comfort, and about noon she started back. When about three miles east of the Highlands and about four miles south of Scotland lightship the waves began to break over her starboard rail heavily. To dodge the water and the wind the passengers began to run around to the port side and to climb on top of the deck house. The boat careened alarmingly to port, and the water swept in over the rail. The terror stricken men rushed back to starboard, and the tug swung deeply down on that side. At the same time three heavy breakers struck the boat in quick succession.

The captain, William Hyatt, stuck pluckily to his post, and sounded the whistle in a prolonged scream for help. Even as he did so the tug filled with the water that poured into her from both sides, and went down like a stone, carrying many of her passengers with her.

The water choked the cry of the whistle, but not before it had been heard and heeded. The Clyde steamship Algonquin, a mile away, heard it, and swung round to go back to the rescue. The tugs Wallace S. Flint, R. J. Moran and Governor also hurried toward the spot. From farther away came the C. E. Evarts.

The Algonquin sent her lifeboat, with First Officers A. M. Rich and four sailors. They picked up ten men, one of whom, however, died a few moments later. The tugs rescued the others who remained afloat. Some few had life belts on, but most of them were clinging to bits of wreckage. A life raft supported a dozen and the top of the pilot house as many more.

The unconscious man picked up by the Algonquin was found in the Nichol's lifeboat. He was under the thwarts, and entangled in fishing lines. The boat, practically unsinkable, was floating right side up, but was full of water.

The Algonquin brought those she had picked up to the city. The living dispersed to their homes and the dead body, which has not been identified, was sent to the morgue. All were people bearing German names and living on the lower east side of the city.

Some of the tugs, not wishing to come to the city, transferred the men they had saved to other tugs. The Sayers brought up thirty-four survivors and landed them on the east side. The C. E. Evarts brought up two bodies and several survivors. The Governor is supposed to have landed others in Brooklyn. Altogether fifty-four out of the seventy-five have been accounted for, three of them being dead.

The propellor Neptune, having on board a large party of fishermen, members of the Earnest and Peffer Fishing clubs, went to the fishing banks yesterday. While there Michael Schaefton, who was sitting on the rail on the lower deck, was thrown overboard by the tossing of the vessel. It was fifteen minutes before he was gotten aboard, and it was impossible for the rescuers to restore animation. At Quarantine Dr. A. F. Tallmadge pronounced the man dead.

Five Drowned While Yachting.

BROOKLYN, June 25.—A catboat was capsized by a sudden squall yesterday off the Atlantic Yacht club house, at the foot of Fifty-sixth street. A pleasure party, consisting of six people—two men, two women, a boy and a 2-year-old girl—were thrown in the water. The Atlantic Yacht club's steam launch at once put out to the rescue, but only the little girl was saved. One of the men had worked heroically to keep the little girl's head above water, and when she was taken from his grasp, his strength being spent, he sank and drowned before help could reach him.

Three Drowned on Lake St. Clair.

DETROIT, June 25.—By the capsizing of the electric launch Ellen W. during a squall on Lake St. Clair yesterday afternoon three persons were drowned and two others narrowly escaped a similar fate. The drowned are Caleb E. Healey and the Misses Katie and Maggie Ortwine.

INTERESTING COMMENTS BY AN OBSERVING TRAVELER.

The Past and Future of a Great Country and Remarkable People—Made Poor by the Spoliation of Foreigners—English Language Coming Into General Use.

We have traveled more than 2,500 miles in India, have seen its grandest scenery, its largest and most interesting cities, its most fertile and some of its desert regions. We have found in Delhi, Agra, Benares, Ambur and Ahmadabad the best examples of Hindoo and Mohammedan architecture. Of course there is much we have not seen. The Dravidical temples of the south of India, remarkable for their size and elaborate decorations, best illustrated at Tanjore and Madura, we can only judge by small specimens seen at Madras and Pondicherry. The wonderful cave temples at Ellora, Ajunta and many other places we have got a fair conception of from that of Elephanta. One could spend years exploring India without exhausting its layers of civilization. We have endeavored to intelligently study, by observation and reading en route, the ethnology, sociology and theology of the country. We have missed no opportunity to talk with British officials and educated natives. We have looked into the work of the missionaries and come to the conclusion that they are doing a great deal of good, though not exactly in the way it is popularly understood at home. I think I may say that our travels in India have materially broadened our views of Asiatic history. Especially have we been impressed with the spectacle of an empire of 240,000,000 people of different races and religions, governed by a handful of Europeans, and in the main well governed, with a large measure of liberty, as perfect protection of life and property as is provided in the most civilized countries of Europe and increasing means of education. The universities and colleges scattered over India are turning out annually thousands of educated natives. It is a curious fact that the Indian who speaks English speaks it without accent and rather better than the average of English or Americans. Nearly all of the schools above the primary grade teach English, and in the majority of them it is the medium of education. More than half of the native newspapers and periodicals, which are numerous and well conducted, are printed in English.

I do not think it a wild prediction that English will be essentially the language of India a hundred years hence. It is curious to contemplate what will be the political result of the education of the Indian people. Will they be content, especially those of the Aryan race, capable of high development, with the shadow of a government which is sometimes driven to its wits' ends with its own domestic problems, in a group of little islands 5,000 miles away? For the present I can scarcely conceive of a greater calamity for India than the failure of Great Britain to hold and govern the country. It would be the signal for anarchy, which would entail the destruction of the people and seriously obstruct the onward march of human progress.

India is a poor country. Its fabulous wealth has been carried off by conquerors or gathered into colossal fortunes by the few rich. The great body of the people are miserably poor. They barely keep body and soul together and do not store up any vital force to resist disease. The failure of one crop entails widespread distress. The failure of two in succession means famine for millions. The government is doing something to improve the conditions. In the last five years canals have been built, increasing the area under irrigation about 23 per cent. How much advantage the tiller of the soil gets from these improvements I do not know. The government costs too much, and the people are taxed to the limit of endurance. The British India civil service is called the best in the world. It is undoubtedly the most expensive. It costs £11,000,000 ($55,000,000) a year. The civil servant serves in various capacities, from a clerk to a lieutenant governor, for 25 years, four of which are given for holidays, and retires with a minimum pension of £1,000 per annum. The cost of all this comes out of the Indian people, and their superstitions and customs rob them of a part of what is left.

There are grave problems in India and more to come, and to solve them will require all the talent which can be secured. It is doubtful whether the merchants of London, the manufacturers of Manchester or the hereditary aristocrats who are sent to hold vice regal courts in Calcutta will solve them in the interest of the people of India, who are today about the poorest fed, clothed and housed people on earth. Yet I cannot but think that these people are capable of great things in the future if they can be properly nourished and educated. Their bright, distinctly Aryan faces look out appealingly through surroundings of squalor and superstition and give promise of high development under favorable conditions. Indeed we see splendid specimens of manhood among them today, and their graceful courtesy shames our rude manners.—Cor Boston Herald.

Serving Toast.

Dry toast should be served directly from the toaster. When this is not practical, pile it on a heated bread plate, cover it with a napkin and put it on the hearth or in the oven. Toast is given in all slight attacks of sickness because it is so easily digested. The more thorough the conversion of the starch the more easily and perfectly the system will manage it, for the change of starch into dextrine by the action of heat is simply doing outside of the body what takes place in it, in the ordinary course of digestion, by the action of the digestive fluids. Therefore when this is accomplished by artificial means nature is spared so much energy.—Philadelphia Times.

It's the Standard Fashion, in washing and cleaning, to use Pearline. Certainly the enormous amount of it used every year proves it. Millions of women use nothing else. And when you see a fashion so universal, so sensible, and so unchangeable, why not adopt it?

There are many things that try to imitate Pearline. Some of them may be more or less successful for a while—but the public is learning. "You can't fool all the people all the time"—and the women who want the best thing to wash with, one that is absolutely safe, will continue to use Pearline—made only by James Pyle, New York 403

GEO. A. SWALM & SON, 18 North St.

MR. WILSON TALKS.

MY Name is Wilson, I do an insurance business on LaSalle street, in Chicago Ill., and I live in Evanston, Ill. Evanston is what was originally a scattering population on a pretty point on Lake Michigan, esteemed years ago far from the city of Chicago, but now one of the varied towns which may go within it by vote of the population.

I am married and have a wife and one child. That child is a boy (I suppose I should feel the same solicitude if it was a girl), and I have a father's natural fancies as to what must be the best thing to give that child the right kind of intelligence, and so divert his course that he may succeed in life. I have studied a great deal upon the subject. My own experience would not be of great value, because I have succeeded only to the limit of the average man and am barely established, still. I own the house and lot upon which I live, and am feeling perfectly safe in meeting the exigencies of the year. I want the boy to take a broader view than I did, to be a bigger man in the world. I have studied how to teach him to do that, and he has done pretty well, as far as the preliminaries go. Now, I have thought over what I should say to him and have sometimes been puzzled. I could not very well tell him what to do. I wanted to tell him what I needed but what I did not learn myself when I was of his age, and what my father did not know how to tell me, or else was not thoughtful enough to do so. I wanted to tell him how to follow the example of those who have succeeded at the present time and under the circumstances which ordinarily affect a young man struggling in this Republic established on this comparatively new world-to-day. I wanted to tell him just what he had better do to get along well, and to point out to him what had been done by the people who were successful at the present time.

Of course, the record of the people of any time past would not be of so much value, because circumstances must necessarily have been different when they were alive. I feel confident, though, that if I could learn, some way and somehow, what the people who are so successful to day have done and how they did it, I could give to my boy such advice as would make his own life at least as far removed from failure as justified by the natural ability he may possess.

I looked around for some authority which I might consult in order to give him the facts most essential with this idea of mine in mind, but I could find none until I discovered that a great publishing firm in Chicago had decided to bring out a book giving the photographs of all the people who are prominent in America to-day. Here was what I wanted. The book, as I have learned, is going to be published in 16 parts, 16 pages to each, with a recent photograph on each page of some active leading American man or woman of to-day, while underneath appears the story of that same person's life—the story telling what that person did, and how the ends attained were eventually accomplished. Here was what I wanted, here was what I needed in various ways, here was what I was certainly seeking in order to obtain the information with which to educate my boy and secure for him that knowledge which will give him a source of thought and make him prominent in the world.

I have the first sheets of this work. It is a graphic story of America's Greatest Men and Women, told in each instance on a single page underneath a photograph of recent date, which conveys to the eye an idea of what that person is. To me the photograph tells even more than the suggestive record beneath; and yet it is odd how in each instance the correct story corresponds with the expression upon the face which is reproduced in the portrait above. I do not know how the series will end. I know very little about this new feature of the newspaper people, I know nothing about the publishers and their expectations, but I do know this: that if the series so begun should be continued to its practical, ordinary good sense end—and I don't care whether that will include 200 or 700 of America's Greatest Men and Women, which is the title of the book—I do know this, that for the ordinary, active and alert business man—I will certainly say far more for the student or the literary man, or the politician or the statesman—for all these I will say it will be simply the most valuable and the most remarkable book produced in modern history. The wonder is that some one has not thought of it before. Yet no one seems to have done so since the days of Plutarch. Plutarch knew something. That shrewd old fellow knew that all who would get out of the drift, all who would accomplish great things, wanted to know every detail of the lives of those who had better luck or more courage or a broader brain than their fellows; but I am no authority on these points. I only know that there is produced a second Plutarch's Lives, that its biographies are shrewd, graphic and curt, and written without bias and without prejudice. I only know that there was a Plutarch—God bless the old fellow—and that there is this modern work.

This is the work I am going to give to my boy. I am going to make him read it thoroughly. The work is announced as consisting of 16 Parts, with 16 pages and 16 photographs in each part, and when bound, the whole series will make a great volume of 256 pages, the like of which has never been equaled. It is the story of the personal character of the men and women who are making the nation's history at this particular time. What a work this is! Do you imagine that I would miss it for my boy, or, incidentally, for myself?

THE MODERN WAY OF MOVING.

Some of Its Features as Noted by a Suburbanite Just Moved Into Town.

"We cannot forget," said the man who moved from the suburbs, "the vans we moved in nor the men who moved us. The whole household was active early that morning waiting for the vans. The main road by which they would approach ran parallel to the street in which we lived and in plain sight. Soon after 7 o'clock we saw them coming, three of them, each drawn by four horses, and all well closed up, a decidedly orderly and business looking procession. They swung around through a cross street and down our street and halted near the house at 7:10. They had told us at the office that the vans would be there at 7 o'clock. Inasmuch as they had had 12 miles to come and it had rained the night before 7:10 didn't seem like a half bad bluff at it.

"A man came down and located the house, and then the two head vans came and backed up to the walk in front. At one side of the house there was a driveway which ran back past the rear of the house, with a loop there around a little oval grass plat. There was none too much room in this driveway, which was not designed for four horse teams, but when the rear van came down the driver swung his leaders and came in at it with the large confidence of a man who has a good team and knows how to handle it. He rounded the oval and halted with his team headed toward the street and the rear end of the van on a line with the rear of the house. When the vans were all in position, the horses were blanketed, and then the men were ready.

"There were six men altogether, and they were all powerful, able bodied men. The house was a 2½ story Queen Anne. The men stripped it in two hours and without any fuss or commotion whatever. At 9:20 the last padlock snapped on the last van door, and the drivers mounted to their seats and hauled out into the road again, once more in line. Then all hands settled down in their seats, and everything was ready for the start. The great axles were very heavy now, and it was no light work to move them. There was a little picturesque plunging at the start, but they were good teams, every one, and they soon had the vans in motion, and after that they walked off with them as though they were shoe boxes on wheels. A few moments later we saw them once more out on the main road, moving now toward the city.

"Four hours later we caught sight of them again. We were then on the train bound for the city and approaching near it. We saw the vans on a road at some little distance from the railroad. They were as well closed up as a wagon train would be under escort in an enemy's country and moving forward.

"Not very long afterward we stood on the steps in the land of brick and mortar and saw the procession still well closed up, appear around the corner. They came up at a trot. It took a little more time to unload than to load, but not much. Soon we heard the last padlock snap again, this time on the last of the empty vans. Once more the procession lined up, moved off and disappeared.

"And left us to settle. It is something of a job to settle, as those who have tried it know, but if anything could make that work seem lighter it would be the exhilaration of moving in the modern way."—New York Sun.

Too Much For Him.

General Meerscheidt-Hullessem, an old and experienced officer of the bluff type, has several times differed with Emperor William's criticism of parades and maneuvers, and the general did not take pains to conceal his opinions. One night the emperor and the general met at a ball, and it happened that the same forenoon the emperor had again criticised the general's troops, deprecating the veteran officer's want of coolness. During the evening the emperor jokingly remarked to the general, who is a bachelor:

"My dear general, you want to become less excited, and," pointing to the ladies, he added, "you ought to marry."

"I beg your majesty's pardon," retorted the general, "but I beg to be excused. A young wife and a young emperor would be too much for me."—Berlin Letter.

A Book's Quaint Title.

A year or two ago there first appeared in Germany a little book entitled 'Darf die Frau Denken?' ("Ought Woman Be Allowed to Think?") It went through a number of editions in a short time, a rare thing to happen in the fatherland, at least in this department of literature. Though small and without any new ideas or issues, it seemed to have had a decided effect in winning favor for the woman rights movement, at present occupying the best minds of a nation as conservative as the German. The writer, a lady, attempts to show that woman is not created for man, but for her calling, and to work out her own destiny on equal terms with man. Hence all educational apparatus and institutions ought to be opened to her.—Baltimore Sun.

The Statue of the Angel Moroni.

A statue of the angel Moroni surmounts the capstone of the tower of the great Mormon temple at Salt Lake City. The figure is of gigantic proportions, being 12 feet 5½ inches in height. It reminds one of a picture of Gabriel blowing the trumpet on the last day and is supposed to represent the Mormon angel bringing the gospel to the children of men. The incandescent lamp above the angel's head is 222 feet from the pavement below.—St. Louis Republic.

An Anthem.

This definition of an anthem is accredited to a British workman. Undertaking to explain the meaning of the word to an inquiring friend, he began, "Well, if I said 'Bring' me a pickax,' that would not be an anthem, but if I said 'Brung—bring—bring—bring me the pick—pick—pickax—bring me the pick—pickax' that would be an anthem."—New York Times.

GREEN PLUMS FOR OLIVES.

How the Innocent Who Eat Foreign Olives are Duped.

From the Bruinsmaid Call.

Representatives of pickling, curing and preserving houses of New York and other cities are making their annual visits to the fruit growing districts of the State, contracting for plums, peaches, pears and other small fruits. The particular fruit now being purchased is green plums. This fruit is now approaching its size and appearance when it is especially desired by pickling establishments, from which it is turned out on the market as the olive—either French or Italian as the demand may be. John F. White, of Leicester, N. Y., has 7,000 plum trees in his orchard. He has sold the entire product, between 15,000 and 20,000 bushels, to olive pickers. The extent of this home-grown olive business may be imagined when it is known that Mr. White's orchard provides only a small portion of the green plums that are sold for olive pickling by the fruit growers of this part of the State.

Diphtheria in Delaware County.

From the Walton Reporter.

Two children of John Gross, of Shinhopple, died, Sunday afternoon, within less than an hour of each other, of diphtheria. The disease is of that malignant type which has broken out at intervals during the past two years at East Branch, Trout Brook and Fish's Eddy. The children were ill but a few days. There are six other cases, a daughter of Mr. Gross, aged about eleven years, and the wife and four children of George Freeman Fuller. All seem to be improving.

CARD FROM HENRY E. MEYER.

It has come to my knowledge that a report is in circulation that I am building a fertilizer factory and intend to resume business. This is not true. I have built an addition to my barn, but having retired from the fertilizer business after having carried it on for twenty-two years, I have no intention of again engaging in it.

When I sold out to William McDowell, last spring, I rented him a house, barn and an acre of ground, and the factory and four acres of ground, together with water supply, for $12 a month, (not $50 as has been reported.) I also sold him $3,000 worth of goods on hand for $2,000, and did him many favors.

By the terms of sale I agreed not to engage in the fertilizer business in five years. I mean to keep that agreement in letter and spirit and I never expect to manufacture fertilizers again. I will not assist any one to engage in the business. I will not advise any to undertake it, but I cannot be expected to and will not undertake to prevent those who wish to engage in it from doing so to the end that Mr. McDowell may have the field entirely to himself.

In this connection I want to say that the authorities ought to appoint an experienced man to have charge of the killing of horses and cattle condemned to death that the cruelty, which often attends their killing, when they are murdered by inexperienced persons may be done away with. HENRY E. MEYER.

The band gave its first open air concert of the season and showed a marked improvement over their previous playing. The feature of the event was the voting contest for the most popular ball player on the nine for a prize of a sweater. Fred Black was the favorite after a very close fight for the honor. The vote was Black 239, Teare 206, Havens 24, Lodge 8, Nicholas 4, Collins 2, Senior 2, Seaman 2.

A Steamboat Boiler Explodes

NEW YORK, June 25.—The excursion steamboat Tolchester and has been making Sunday excursions up the river to Coney Island and Newburg since the 1st of the month. Yesterday she had 2,000 people on board. Just after the steamboat had left Coney Island on the homeward journey four loud explosions were heard, which were quickly followed by a wild panic. A rush was made to the stern of the boat, and many of the women and children on board were crushed and trampled, although as far as known none were seriously hurt. The engineer, however, was terribly scalded, the explosions being caused by the bursting of the boiler.

A SON OF KIT CARSON.

HOME AND FAMILY OF A DESCENDANT OF THE FAMOUS SCOUT.

An Adobe Cabin In the Shade of a Spreading Oak by a Santa Monica Canyon Shelters Sam Carson, His Indian Wife and Their Dark Browed Offspring.

When old Kit Carson died, full of years and Indian fights, he left a son, who, resting content with the name which his father had won, betook himself far from the strife of this world and built him a home under the suns of southern California. Far up in one of the canyons of Santa Monica he cut down a few sturdy cedars and built his shelter. Then he covered it with the mud which he dug from the bed of the mountain torrent flowing noisily at the bottom of the canyon. His house was on the hillside overlooking the stream and was shaded by a huge live oak, which spread its branches this way and that for his half Indian children to sit and swing upon.

This was the home of Sam Carson, and just before he built his adobe he had taken to wife a comely Indian woman whose tribe for centuries had lived in the foothills of the Sierras Santa Monica, whence they could look out upon the blue Pacific, with Santa Catalina rising, a blue hump in the ocean, 30 miles away.

A wanderer up the canyon green under the warm February sun found Mme. Carson sitting placidly on a stump in an onion field, mending her lord's jeans. She was Indian, and Indianlike was wrinkled and worn and bent, though her eyes were still bright and sparkling. She looked at least 60 years old as she sat there, glancing cannily at me and then pointing out the ravages which storm and fire had made in past years.

She put her sewing down on her knee and in broken English, mixed with Mexican Spanish and frequent expressive little grunts, she told me all their troubles of the past.

The old Indian woman suddenly turned to watch three little dark browed children that were chasing one another along the hill's crest, their chubby bodies silhouetted against the blue sky beyond.

"Mine—all mine," she said proudly. "Sam's and mine. I have had seven children, four grown, three little. See" and she pointed her wrinkled finger at the youngsters, now rolling gleefully down the hillside.

"Tarantula children!" she screamed. "Tarantulas like the worm earth on the sunny hills and come out and sting—sometimes little children dead," she explained, and then she started sewing again, leaving the youngsters and the tarantulas to their own devices.

"How—how old are you?" the visitor ventured.

The old woman dug thoughtfully into the dirt with one of her brown toes. Then she drew it back heavily beneath her skirt and looked over at the mountains. "Maybe 40," she said, with a sudden smile.

"Oh, no, not so much as that."

She thought again for a long time, watching the Pacific gleaming in the sunlight. "Well, maybe 50 then," and she smiled contentedly.

The ocean breeze blew up the canyon, bringing with it the faint roar of the breakers. Occasionally one could hear the crack of a rifle, at which the old Indian woman never failed to glance up quickly. Her sewing was almost done when Sam Carson, her husband, walked out of the thickets up the canyon and stalked lonely across the field, gun in hand and a small yellow dog at his heels. The wife arose quickly, and Sam sat down on the smooth stump. He was as brown as his Indian wife, his hair was gray, and his beard was grizzled. He spoke in a low toned, deliberate fashion, as most people do who live long under a semitropic sun.

"Do you see that little cur?" he said. "That darned little dog has just killed a wildcat," and the son of the old scout wiped his brow and prepared to tell the rest of his story. He had a reputation for thrilling and impossible tales.

"Me and Baldy—I called him after the old mountain over there—me and Baldy, we was a-lyin through the underbrush. I thought I'd shoot some gophers just for luck. Well, sir, I was standin in front of a big live oak, way up the canyon there where it gets narrer. All of a suddin I heard a whurrun noise in the air. I looked up, and bless me if there wasn't a big wildcat flying right down on me. I gave one jump, but I expected the cat would have me the next lick. Oh, she was a big un, I'm tellin you.

"But Baldy was there. He just sailed into that cat. My, how Baldy did shake her," and Sam carelessly shied a lump of dirt at the diminutive cur's nose. It would have been an unpardonable insult to suggest that any wildcat would have made two mouthfuls of little Baldy.

"Did Baldy kill her?"

"As dead as a mail," said Sam.

"Well, where is the skin of the cat anyway?" I asked.

"Baldy chewed him all up," said Sam thoughtfully. "Chewed him all up. 'Twasn't worth bringin home," and handing his rifle to his wife to carry Sam walked slowly back among the onion sprouts and disappeared with her in the cabin under the big oak.—Los Angeles New York Tribune.

HE NEVER FOUND IT OUT.

Pathetic Tale of a Lost Pocketbook and a Charming Gown.

"What a charming gown that is!" cried the young woman with the picture hat. "I only wish I had one like it, but I never could afford it."

"Neither could I, my dear, if I hadn't lost my pocketbook."

"Good gracious, prosperity has affected your mind! I don't see how."

"Well, you see, Albert gave me the money to buy a gown. I told him it was not half enough, but he protested it was every cent he could afford. I cried for two days about it, and as he didn't give in then I concluded he was really telling the truth, so I started out to do the best I could. I went to every dry goods store in town and never worked so hard in my life, but I couldn't find what I wanted at the price. Finally in despair I decided to take the first piece I had looked at, and oh, Laura, imagine my horror to find when the clerk had cut off that pattern that I had lost my pocketbook!"

"How perfectly awful!"

"Wasn't it? I thought I should die. I knew I would have to tell Albert all about it some time, so I rushed around to his office to tell him in the presence of strangers, when he could not say anything dreadful. I wept and accused myself of carelessness, when he said he would advertise, for I couldn't remember when I had it last nor how much money was in it. His partner was there, and he seemed to feel so sorry for me—he's an old bachelor—that Albert didn't scold much and actually gave me the money the second time."

"And you went and got the gown?"

"Well, no. I had changed my mind about that piece of goods, it had such a cheap look, so I just went home to think it over."

"But you never got that gown cheap!"

"No, I didn't. The fact is, I found my pocketbook on the hall table where I had left it when I took out my car fare in my glove. I am so careful of money that I don't like to display much in the cars."

"And what did Albert say when he found it out?"

"He would have said a great deal if he had found it out, but he never did. I knew he'd scold me for carelessness if I told him, so I just kept all the money and bought my gown. I'm so glad you like it, dear!"—Chicago Tribune.

Somebody is creating a sensation in Chicago and other lake cities by personating Miss Madeline Pollard. As yet nobody has had the hardihood to travel under the name of Col. Breckinridge except the original owner.—Cincinnati Times Star.

The Irish members of Parliament, following the lead of Justin McCarthy, are very anxious to stave off a dissolution until their campaign fund is in better shape. Instead of £18,000, as has been reported, the total amount on hand is only £3,500. Strange to say the people of Ireland treat the appeals of the Irish Parliamentarian with indifference, and they realize that they must look for financial help in the coming campaign from outside sources.

A patient in an English lunatic asylum, whose mania was to swallow things, got away with a large number of nails, not long ago. The doctors, although they recognized that there was not the remotest chance of saving the man's life, decided on an operation and cutting into the man's stomach removed 192 nails from one and a half to three inches in length, a screw, two buttons and a mass of matted hair. The weight of the nails was nearly two pounds.

The purpose of the Lexow Committee to adjourn, this week, for two months, without allowing those who have been accused of malfeasance and misfeasance any opportunity to deny, rebut or refute the charges against them, is so manifestly unfair that even papers, which have been in sympathy with the committee, are criticising the course on which it has determined. The real purpose of the adjournment is to have other evidence that may be taken fresh in the public mind as the time for election approaches. If the efforts of the committee were not so plainly in the line of politics rather than of good government, they would make a much greater impression on the public mind.

The assassination of President Carnot shocks the whole civilized world. If the crime was the act of an assassin seeking revenge for some real or fancied private wrong or of a crank whose addled brain saw in the President's death a way to help France or "Humanity,"—that abstraction over which so many social theorists go daft, it is atrocious enough, but if, as is almost certain, the assassination is the result of an anarchist plot, the crime becomes of infinitely greater magnitude for it shows that those enemies of all government, undeterred by the relentless warfare waged upon by the police, are still plotting the deaths of European rulers. Carnot's death will cause a panic in every European capital and despite police vigilance it will be long before the alarm is quieted.

The Herald insists that the revelations of abuses in the New York city asylums on Ward's Island call for the transfer of the asylums to the State, and the placing of the patients under State care. It urges the change on the grounds of humanity and economy. The city now supports its own insane and pays a State tax of over $500,000 for the support of the State hospitals. Under State care the expense of maintaining the city asylums would be levied on the whole State and the city would get more than it paid. As a financial proposition it is evident that New York would be a gainer if it accepted State care. But how about the rural counties, whose representatives in Senate and Assembly were persuaded to vote for the State care act under the assurance that New York and Kings counties, which were excluded from its provisions, would have to pay more than half the cost of State maintenance of the insane?

It is now known that ten persons were drowned. Up to noon thirty-seven were missing.

FRANCE'S MURDERED PRESIDENT.

The Senate and House Adjourn After Adopting Resolutions of Condolence and Sympathy.

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The assassination of President Carnot, of France, was the chief topic in the Senate, to-day. It was referred to in the opening prayer by the chaplain.

Mr. Morgan in a voice tremulous with emotion said that as Chairman of the Committee on Foreign relations of the Senate, it devolved on him to announce the assassination of the President of the French Republic. He offered resolutions of sympathy with the people of France in their bereavement and calling for the adjournment of the Senate as a mark of respect to the memory of Carnot, also requesting the President to communicate the resolutions to the government of France and Madame Carnot.

Mr. Morgan spoke at length on the resolution and Mr. Sherman also spoke. After adopting the resolution the Senate adjourned.

The House also adjourned, after adopting resolutions of condolence and symyathy with the French people and Mme. Carnot, and directing the President to transmit the resolutions to the French government.

A White Baboon.

The white baboon which recently arrived in England is a representative of a species extremely rare—so rare indeed that not only is this the only specimen in captivity, but its existence has been regarded as chimerical. The animal now in England was captured two years ago from its mother when quite a baby, by a party of Trek Boers in the Murchisas range district of Johannesberg. Since that time the baby has developed into a full grown baboon of nearly 4 feet in height. During the voyage from the cape it suffered terribly from seasickness but has now quite recovered its health and activity. The fur is perfectly white and very long. In spite of its mature age milk is still its favorite food.—London Graphic.

The second ambition he has since realized, since the retirement of Mr. Gladstone and the third with his recent good fortune on the turf.—New York Telegram.

"Gentlemen—My husband has had the grip twice, and the second attack left him in a prostrated condition, health tone low, very weak, and with no appetite. JUST A TRIFLING PLACE.

Mr. Reverend Calls Down Boys and Girls Who Come to Church to See Each Other.

Rev. Dr. Reverend, of St. Paul's Church, has been greatly annoyed in the past by some of the young people, whom he believes attend the Sunday evening services for other than religious purposes.

Last evening he reached the point where he could endure the imposition no longer, and while the choir was rendering the hymn just previous to the sermon the doctor stopped the singing and freed his mind by the delivery of the following: "I have refrained from speaking of a certain matter until now, but forbearance has ceased to be a virtue. There are some young girls and boys who come here every Sunday night to see if their boys or girls are here, and then run out. Better wait at home until you learn better manners, or find out about the matter before you come. The house of God is no place for that kind of work. It cannot and will not be tolerated any longer."

The choir then resumed the singing of the hymn.

GOSHEN, June 15.—Court opened at 11:30, this morning.

The case is now on.

MRS. HALLIDAY AFTER THE TRIAL

Does Not Put on Sheep—Cast on Her Side of Her

From the Port Jervis Gazette.

Sheriff Hutchison K. Decker was in town, Saturday, and in conversation with a Gazette reporter concerning Mrs. Halliday, said she did not sleep at all, Friday night, neither did she eat her food.

Among other things said about the trial, the sheriff thought her evidence in rebutting several witnesses for the defense to make a thirteenth consideration of her and realizing the willingness for the prosecution to make a similar consideration showed signs of nearly on her portrayed thought it had quite an effect on the jury.

She has caused him great trouble during her confinement at Monticello, and he will welcome the coming of June 16th, when she will be removed from his charge.

Funeral of Mrs. Owen.

The funeral of Mrs. Oscar E. Owen took place at her late residence at 2:30 p. m., yesterday. It was private, only relatives and a few intimate friends of the family being present.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred H. Boyd, Wickham Young, C. Macerdell, Jr., Howard Hagan, Arlington Ambler and Fred C. Woodward. The interment was in Hillside Cemetery.

AN EPIDEMIC OF DIPHTHERIA.

Fifteen Cases in Chester—One Death Yesterday.

The pretty village of Chester is suffering from an epidemic of diphtheria, although the fact was not known until yesterday morning.

There have been many cases of sore throat in the village, some of which were diagnosed by the physicians as quinsy, but yesterday morning, it became evident to the physicians that diphtheria had developed in at least fifteen cases in as many families, scattered all over the village.

A Mrs. Crook, of near Greycourt, died, yesterday morning, from the disease and some of the other cases are reported as serious. Mrs. Crook was the only grown person afflicted, the others all being small children.

Mr. J. D. Thompson, the hardware merchant, has a child ill with the disease, and this morning sent to Middletown for Miss M. L. Lent, a trained nurse, to take charge of the little one.

The cause of the outbreak of the disease is not known, but every effort will be made to ascertain and remove it. Meantime the houses in which there is diphtheria will be quarantined and all that is possible will be done to prevent its spread.

It is also said there are four cases in Goshen, but all the sick are recovering.

ONTARIOS AT ELLENVILLE.

They Receive a Royal Welcome from Citizens and Firemen.

The excursion of Ontario Hose Co. to Ellenville, Saturday, was a grand success in every sense of the word. The Middletown party on the special train numbered about 175. Others followed on the regular trains until the number reached about 300.

The people and the firemen of Ellenville gave the Ontarios and their friends a cordial reception.

A band of music met the special at the depot and led the way to the grounds.

At 2 p. m. the entire fire department turned out and gave a parade in honor of the Ontarios.

The party left for home at midnight, arriving here at 1 a. m.

INCIDENTS AND HAPPENINGS IN GOSHEN.

Trustees to Act To-night on the New Blocks of the Electric Road—Election for Fourth of July Issues—Out Politicians' Election—Other Notes.

From our regular correspondent.

—The matter of the new route desired by the Middletown-Goshen Traction Company will be publicly discussed, to-night, at the 7 o'clock meeting of the Board of Trustees. It is expected that the consent of the Trustees will be given, and that the much discussed franchise will thereby be secured.

—The entries for the Fourth of July races of the Goshen Driving Park Association close to-day. There is already a long list of entries for the three races —Elections of officers for the coming term at the meeting of Orange Lodge, I. O. O. F., to-morrow night. A full attendance is desired.

—"Danny" Andrews has accepted a position in the steam ry at Kipp's Station.

—The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Niven, on Spruce Hill, is in a very precarious condition, and little hopes of his recovery are entertained.

SUNDAY'S VIOLENT STORM.

Very Severe North of This City—Considerable Damage Caused by Hail and Wind

The storm that came upon us, yesterday afternoon, did little damage in this city. The hail stones were quite large, but so few in number that they did no harm. A tree in front of Carl Lorman's was uprooted and branches were torn from trees in different parts of the city.

To the north of this city, however, the storm was severe and considerable damage has been reported along the line of the Crawford road and doubtless other townships not yet heard from suffered equally as badly.

At Bullville, Circleville and Thompson Ridge, the hail stones were very large, not as big as hens' eggs, but large enough to break window glass, as many persons learned to their sorrow. Twenty panes of glass were broken in Supervisor Roberson's residence at Bullville and a Mr. Bennett's house in the same place, fared is even worse, over thirty panes of glass being broken.

Many trees in the woods and orchards in the vicinity of Thompson Ridge and Bullville were uprooted by the wind which accompanied the storm.

Lightning also got in its work in the locality. Four telegraph poles south of Bullville were shattered and one of the wires broken. A colt belonging to M. S. Aitken, of Port Orange,—one of four counting in a pasture—was instantly killed. The deer was open and the foal entered, killed the colt and went elsewhere, without touching the building or harming the other horses.

It was reported that the house formerly owned by A. B. Taylor in Pine Bush, was struck by lightning, but we have been unable to get any particulars.

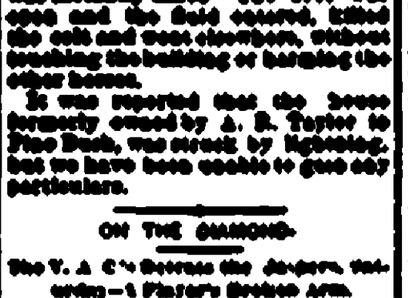
ON THE DIAMOND.

The Y. A. C.'s Defeat the Jaspers, notwithstanding—A Player's Broken Arm.

The ball game between the Y. A. C.'s and the Jaspers, at the Hospital grounds, Saturday afternoon, was won by the former club by a score of 17 to 12. The contest was very exciting and a number of accidents resulted. Canfield, the Y. A. C.'s pitcher was very wild, hitting four batsmen with the ball.

George Nevin, the Jaspers' right fielder, while attempting to steal from second to third base, fell and broke his left arm near the elbow Dr. Mills reduced the fracture.

The following is the summary:



Two Great Three Months

My son suffered night and day with inflammatory rheumatism so that he was unable to lead himself. Four doctors visited him, and I am sure I would be my boy up on Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Mrs. W. H. Ogden, wife of Rev. Ogden, Pastor Baptist Church, Winchester, Ind.

A Fruitful Cash.

The papers round about here prophesy fair at the Dutch corners, but we will be at least sly for him that he valedictorian the dandelion reported in a well-known Kansas cash. At the Coal Kingdom we expect to agree entirely with this clever forecast. "Yes, the philosophy advocated you will find to pay, if half good and talking like it."—Hope City Register.

Everybody likes to be called handsome, especially the young ladies. But that is simply impossible as long as they have to get, and with blotches and spots. But wait, there is an end of this; one or two bottles of sulphur bitters will remove all such disfigurations, and make your face fair and rosy.—Hinsdale Bell, Jefferson.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than six hours after taking the first dose I could feel a wonderful improvement in the circulation of my body. When I had taken three doses I could [illegible] something I had not done [illegible] and my limbs had been swollen so [illegible] they seemed almost petrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down and I felt much better than I had my own words. On my recommendation six others are using the remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, [illegible] Chicago, Ill.

JAY GOULD'S NEPHEW.

The San Francisco schoolboy Whose Name Cost Him Perhaps a Fortune.

In one of the public schools of this city is a bright eyed lad of 15 years known as Fred Gould. No one to look at him would ever dream how near he came to being the favorite nephew of the late wizard of Wall street or what a petty trick of fortune it was that cheated him out of a million or two.

Fred, whose full name is Jay Frederick Gould, is the son of Abram Gould of St. Louis, the only brother of Jay Gould. Abram is a railroad man in the employ of the Texas and Pacific and Missouri Pacific. He never traded on his relationship to the millionaire, so that he is little known outside his immediate circle of railroad acquaintances.

Fred first saw the light of day in St. Louis. The happy father notified his brother in Wall street that he had a son and heir, and Jay, in a spasm of fraternal feeling, asked that the child should be christened Jay Gould, Jr., and promised that he would do something handsome for his namesake.

The father detested the junior, which he thought his boy would have to write after his name for a good many years, so he compromised by calling the boy Jay Frederick.

The lad was left motherless at an early age, but he received a mother's care from the wife of Captain Austin of the Pacific Mail company, who practically adopted the boy. Jay Frederick was brought to Oakland, where he lived until the Austins moved to this city. Recently the captain died at Panama, but the widow lives here and sends the boy to school. The boy has the Gould features and complexion. He is very slow in his movements and in his speech, but he inherits the business sagacity of his uncle, as he generally gets the better of any of his playmates in a trade. He also shows a shrewdness beyond his years in purchasing any articles.

When his uncle died, Mrs. Austin was very anxious to learn whether the millionaire had done anything for his nephew. She knew that Jay had been wroth because the father had not followed his instructions in naming the boy, but she thought the millionaire might have relented. The will showed that he gave Abram $25,000, but there was absolutely no mention of the little boy whose middle name knocked him out of a chance of a fortune.—San Francisco Chronicle.

FOR RICH STUDENTS ONLY.

Princely Quarters at Yale, With the Rent Rates For the New Year.

In the list of rentals in the Yale dormitories no change has been made in the rooms that have been occupied, but students have been watching to see at what prices the accommodations in the new buildings—Vanderbilt, White and Berkeley—would be placed. Durfee has been considered the rich man's dormitory, but Vanderbilt appears destined to take that distinction immediately.

Berkeley will be a cheaper priced dormitory, as its 40 rooms bring an average of $2 37 per week, with the highest priced ones, of which there are four, at $5 50 a week. White will average $4.11 per week for its 52 rooms, but it has eight at $1 per week each, from which the price rises to one at $10.

The cheapest room in Vanderbilt will be rented at $4.50 a week without board. From that the prices rise to $10 a week each for 16 rooms, an average of $8.16 per week for the 66 rooms in that building. In each case the cost will be divided between two students who occupy the same suit. The university will receive $19,350 from Vanderbilt hall, $9,120 from White and $3,420 from Berkeley for each college year week.

The net return from Vanderbilt hall will probably be greater than those of any other college dormitory in the country, but it is stated strongly that the net proceeds will not exceed 1½ per cent of the cost of the building and land. Many people are wondering why, in view of the fact that the Vanderbilt is evidently to be a rich man's home, the corporation did not place the rentals higher, to get a greater return from the building. The rooms would all have been taken at whatever prices were placed upon them, and the corporation could obtain a large revenue from this building.—New Haven Palladium.

Lemons In Summer.

In hot weather a lemon sherbet or water ice is refreshing and wholesome. The juice of an orange is a great addition to this ice, and the proportions may be varied. Four large, juicy lemons make quite a quantity when an orange is used. Peel the yellow rind of the lemons very thin, and from the orange also, and put to boil in a porcelain saucepan, with 1½ pounds of sugar and a quart of water. Boil five minutes and set away to cool. When cold, strain into the lemon and orange juice. Strain the whole into the freezer and freeze until stiff; then take out the beater and the whites of three eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Beat well together, cover closely or put into a mold, repack and set away to harden.—Philadelphia Record.

Snakes In Ireland!

Mr. Rohu, Grand Parade, Cork, has on exhibition a snake which was killed at Mr. Lane's, Veron Mount, lately. It attacked children playing in the fields. The children raised an alarm, and the snake was killed. It is not so large as the snake killed on the banks of the Tramore some time ago, but it is of the same species and is said to be poisonous. How these snakes came to the Douglas district is enveloped in mystery.—Cork Examiner.

MacMahon's Memoirs.

A Paris paper is making an effort to secure the memoirs of Marshal MacMahon's career, but so far without success. The marshal left the manuscript to his son and gave a copy to each of his children, but enjoined that it should neither be published nor destroyed. Only a few persons—friends of the family—have been permitted to read the memoirs.—Press Journal.

"ADAMANT" WALL PLASTER!

The New, Cheap Substitute for Common Plaster.

It is very hard and very adhesive; it does away with the warping and shrinkage of doors and sashes, and the building is not saturated with water, as it necessarily must be when common plaster is used; it costs originally but little more than lime plaster, and in the end its superior qualities make it immeasurably cheaper; it saves waiting several weeks or months for the buildings to dry out; it does not crack or fall off even in the case of leakage; it is applied easily by any good plasterer; it is the only material with which repairing can be done neatly and to stay.

"It is well for a speaker to know where his peroration is going to end when he begins," said E. R. Harper of Denver.

"I heard a young lawyer make his maiden speech. It was in defense of a fellow who was about half witted, arrested on the charge of stealing a hog, the young attorney having been appointed by the court. His defense was that his client was an idiot and unable to distinguish between right and wrong. He closed a flowing speech with a peroration like this:

"'Gentlemen of the jury, look at my client. That low, receding forehead, those lusterless eyes, portend that he was deprived by nature of the power to distinguish right from wrong, ignorant of the distinction which exists between his own property and that of others. To him, as to the 2-year-old child, whatever he wants and can reach belongs to him. He knows neither why it does nor why it does not. But, gentlemen of the jury, such are the institutions of this, our free and glorious country, that my client, idiot though he is, stands for a trial today by a jury of his peers.' The culprit got the full limit of the law."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Von Bulow.

The literature of the world was Von Bulow's. He loved the music of all the world, so he knew it by heart. I saw some illustrations of his wonderful memory. I got some of Greig's lyric pieces from Warnouth, which I showed to Bulow. He was not acquainted with them. I believe they were then quite new. He glanced them through before giving them back to me. A few days afterward, at a party, he sat down to the piano and played one of them, the most difficult one. "Was not that it?" "Yes, exactly." He could multiply figures like 1,750,374 by 2,656,793 in his head. I think most people would need pencil and paper.—Bjornstjerne Bjornson.

THESE ARE THE DAYS.

When the Girl Who Is to Be Vaccinated Scents Trouble From Afar.

These are the days when the thoughts of the "merry merry maiden" turn to vaccination and in consequence the preservation of her health and beauty—more particularly her beauty. There is a testy old doctor on North Charles street who, if he despises one thing more than another, it is the giddy, gossiping girl, and one day just such a one tripped daintily up to his office door, rang the bell and when the doctor made his appearance told him with a giggle she had come to be vaccinated.

"Where?" asked the doctor bluntly.

"Where?" echoed the maiden in wide eyed wonder.

"Yes. On the arm or above the ear?"——

A delicate shriek broke off the doctor's sentence.

"Oh, on the arm, of course," said little Miss Giddy.

"I'll soon fix that." And with a dexterous movement he made a small rip in the seam of the sleeve of the pretty silk waist and exposed a bit of white arm about the size of a silver dollar.

"Doctor, will it hurt?"

"Certainly."

"Oh, my! How do you do it, with a scrape or a lance?"

"Neither, I use this."

And he held aloft a knife big enough to chop a man's leg off.

"With this," he continued, "I chip a chunk out of your arm about the size of the pound of flesh Shylock wanted from Antonio's body. Now, if you make the least outcry during the operation, you'll be sure to contract smallpox. Be quiet now."

The now half fainting girl closed her eyes and gritted her teeth. A slightly painful scratch was felt upon her arm, then "all was over."

"Is that all?" asked Miss Giddy.

"That's all," answered the doctor.

Then she passed on her homeward way a martyr to vaccination and the doctor wiped the gore from his dagger and calmly awaited the next victim.—Baltimore Telegram.

He Was Particular.

A Buffalonian who is known all over the country, and who is moreover, a man of gentle and sober mien, with religious inclinations so far as he is himself concerned, with a wife whom he adores and a family of charming daughters, fell ill in a western city a time ago. He was very sick and his forlorn condition attracted the attention of one of the chambermaids who worked about the hotel. When she was not scrubbing the floor she was in his room and waited on him and cared for him assiduously.

The Buffalonian grew better in a week or so, and of course, he was very grateful to the woman. He offered her money, but she indignantly refused it and told him that any Christian would do what she had done. The man was perplexed. He did not want to press the money on the woman and he did want to show her that he appreciated her attention. On the day before he was to go out for the first time the woman came into the room to see if there was anything he wanted.

"I wish you would take some money," the man said as she was about to leave.

"No indeed," she replied. "I did what I did for you with no hope of reward. It was no more than any member of the church would have done."

Then a happy thought struck the man. "Wouldn't you like to go to the theater some night?" he inquired.

Witheringly the woman replied. "I never go to the theater or anywhere else with strange men."

The Buffalonian fainted.—Buffalo Express.

Not Affected by the Money Market.

He was the only tenant of the big office building who was apparently not affected by the stringency in the money market. While the others ran here and there with gloomy faces he sauntered along with a cigar in his mouth and a bright smile for every one. Finally some one asked him if he had not found money very close.

"Haven't noticed it," he said pleasantly. "I've heard some talk of it, but it hasn't affected me."

"Haven't you felt it at all?" inquired the other in surprise.

"Not in the least. The fact is, I suppose I was prepared for it."

"Oh, you knew it was coming, did you, and got under cover?"

"No—not exactly. But it really amounts to the same thing. I exhausted my credit some months ago and it really makes no difference to me whether money is close or easy. That makes me a little better off than the rest of you just now."—Chicago Tribune.

A Sure Enough Fish Story.

Realistic Teaching.

"I am not going to that horrid Delsarte school any more."

"Why not, dear?"

"The teacher shook a mouse on a string at us this afternoon in order to teach us the proper expression and attitude for abject terror. Ugh!"—Indianapolis Journal.

Disappointing.

"Where?" asked the other in a tremor of excitement.

"In the directory."—Philadelphia Record.

AN "ARGUS" MAN OFF DUTY AIMS AT SEVERAL SUBJECTS.

An Off Week for the Man Off Duty—A Few Remarks on the Making of Newspapers—Do Editors Know What People Like to Read?—Much Haste, Little Speed

The Halliday trial, proceedings of the court at Goshen, doings of the Common Council and the commencement exercises of Wallkill Academy, made such demands on the ARGUS'S space, last week, that I was knocked out, only had one inning in six days. It's queer the way things go in making up a newspaper. It's always a feast or a famine,—so much "matter" that the editor don't know what to do with it, or so little that he don't know where to get enough to fill the columns. It only happens at very rare intervals that copy and space come out anywhere near even. It isn't often though that Middletown newspapers have such a big week for news as last week was.

I suppose that some hypercritical people will say that there wasn't much news in the stuff the papers printed, and I have in mind a man who likes to drop into the ARGUS office and give advice as to the editorial management of the paper, who was very free in his comments on the folly of reprinting the oft told story of Mrs. Halliday's crimes, but I noticed that whether it was news or not, he had made himself thoroughly conversant with the progress of the the trial by reading all that the local papers printed concerning it as well as the highly colored yarns of several of the New York papers. It really doesn't matter how old a story is; so long as it interests the great mass of the reading public, it is good newspaper matter. It isn't always news that most interests people. Take a wedding, for instance. The guests know as much about it as the newspaper man whose misfortune it is to be assigned to write it up, yet the published account is read with a great deal more eagerness by those who were present, than by those who were not.

I was asked, not long ago, by a very bright woman, who insisted that I should talk shop, if editors supposed that they knew what people liked to read. I had to admit that judged by the stuff that editors allowed to get into print, there was a strong presumption that they knew very little about the taste of the reading public and yet there is and can be no rigid standard applied to what goes into a daily newspaper. The comings and goings of Miss Parvenu have no interest for the patrician dame, yet they have for the Parvenu family and all its collateral branches and all the friends of the Parvenus, and though the patrician nose may sniff at the mention of Miss Parvenu's name in print, it does not by any means follow that the Parvenu item was not a good piece of news. So, too, in regard to such matter as the Halliday trial. There may be a few in the community who object to a repetition of the revolting details, but it is unfortunately true that a great many people like to "sup on horrors," and that being the case, it behooves a newspaper that would keep its hold on popular favor to furnish forth the feast

Easy to Make a Strong Cigar.

A tobacco manufacturer who moves in a select coterie of tobacco loving friends was recently told by one of those connoisseurs that he had yet to find a cigar that was too strong for him to enjoy. Acting on the suggestion, the manufacturer took occasion to have a cigar specially constructed of stems and neatly covered with a rich, appetizing Havana leaf rolled into points at both ends. This he presented to his friend with the wish that it might prove strong enough to suit his taste. Suspecting nothing, the friend proceeded to smoke, and was soon surprised to see coils like rain clouds curling from the end of the cigar. As the skin peeled off his tongue his brain began to reel, and he soon gave up in an old fashioned attack of mania. He no longer boasts of his capacity before people who are in the business.—Philadelphia Record.

NOW AND FORTY YEARS AGO

MIDDLETOWN AS A HAMLET AND CITY

Evidences of Growth in Area, Wealth Population and Governmental Expenses, Found in a Comparison of the Tax Roll of To day, With That of 1851—Other Interesting Facts Culled from an Old Tax Book.

Those of us who have lived in Middletown during the past twenty years can realize its greath growth in population and all other respects that go to make up the progress of a town during those years, but we only know what Middletown was four decades ago as we are told by those few persons now living here, who were men and women in the early fifties.

There are doubtless many who were born in Middletown forty years ago who reside here still, but to the eyes of childhood Middletown seemed a much bigger town than it really was. One of these latter expressed as much surprise when he discovered the old tax roll from which the data for this article was obtained, as will many others who came upon the stage of life in Middletown in later years.

In the days of which we write Middletown's boundaries were one-half mile in all directions from Franklin Square and houses were scattered, as is shown by the number of assessments for acres. The largest owner of acres within the corporation was Chas. Roberts, with his twenty acres, John B. Hanford and James Cassedy each owning eighteen and Richard A. Holly had twelve. Various other parties owned from one-half acre to five and six acres There were also numerous vacant lots To-day, even with its enlarged boundaries, there are few persons can boast of acres, although several large farms have been sold in lots and built upon in the meantime and similar purchases are now being made and improved outside the city limits.

The tax roll to which we have referred was recently found by Mr. John T. Ogden, the West Main street harness maker—to whose courtesy we owe the privilege of perusing its ancient pages—among some of the books and papers of his father, the late Thomas Purdy Ogden.

The tax roll is only an ordinary leather backed pocket memorandum. On the front cover is written, "Village Assessments for 1851." The assessors were N. H. Corwin and Hiram E. King, the latter the father of Mr. J. T. King the druggist. The collector was Mr. Thomas Purdy Ogden, father of Messrs. J. T. and H. C. Ogden, and the members of the Board of Trustees who issued to him the warrant, which appears in full in the book, were Messrs. Israel O. Beattie, John Bailey, Gilbert Hulse and S. S. Wickham.

The total assessed valuation of real and personal property in Middletown at that time was $420,364 and the total amount of tax levied was $180, and the rate per thousand was forty-three cents.

As our annual budget has just been completed, a comparison of present valuation and taxes will here be interesting as proving the monstrous strides made by our town in a little over forty years.

Taxes to be raised this year, $69,208 38, or $60,028 38 more than in 1851.

Valuation in 1893, real, $2,606,050; personal, $248,225, total, $2,854,275.

Tax rate, 1893, $24.56 per $1,000,

Another interesting feature of this old book is that of the $420,364 of valuation $183,189 was on personal property, leaving but $237,175 of assessment on real property or a personal tax of nearly 50 per cent. of the entire assessement, while to-day personal property pays but a very small proportion of the taxes.

In this connection some comparisons of real and personal property assessment in those days may be interesting. The store of Samuel Denton, now Denton's corner, was assessed at $2,500; his house at $2,600, while he paid a personal tax on $10,000. J. B. McMunn paid taxes on an assessment of $1,700 on his store and $3,000 on personal. The Middletown Bank was assessed $2,500 on its banking house, (now the Hasbrouck building) and for personal property $74,018, the odd 18 cents in the latter item showing that the assessors knew just how much personal property there was on which to make a levy.

The largest taxpayer in those days was the Middletown Bank on the items above named the amount being $32 75, Samuel Denton paid $6 46 and the "New York and Erie Road" came next paying only $5 31 on a valuation of $12,500.

The smallest taxpayers were D. S. Ludlum, Edward Simons and Walter Palmer, each paying one cent. As their assessments were only $20 they paid more than their share. The late Judge Wilkin paid two cents on a vacant lot and a total tax of less than a dollar.

E. P. Wheeler paid taxes on an assessment of $2,000 on real and $7,000 on personal property.

The Orange County Foundry was assessed $5,500 on real and $10,000 on personal.

James N. Pronk was assessed $2,200 on real and $6,000 on personal property.

Robert H. Houston paid only $1.51 on his houses and lands, which included not only the lands on Houston's Hill, but much of the land now built upon on Houston, Sprague and Academy avenues. The valuation was only $3,600, or less than many of the single lots sold from the same property are worth to-day.

The following will show the difference in taxes in 1851 and 1893, on certain properties we have been able to locate from the old list:

	1851	1893
Holding House	$ 69	$ 122 80
Weller & Demarest	95	110 52
The Palm	52	49 12
Ayers's store	47	33 14
Squier's store	92	110 52
Commercial Hotel	77	127 71
Madden house	61	67 30
Pronk's corner	86	132 60

There are other properties that would doubtless show even a greater increase in taxation, but these are sufficient to show the difference between now and forty years ago, when only the insignificant sum of $180, was required to run the village government.

The manner of assessment in those days was evidently different from the present methods, for in this tax book is a certificate signed by the Assessors, Messrs. King and Corwin, in which they certify that with the exception of property, both real and personal, the value of which was sworn to by the owners, they estimated the property at what they believed to be its true value and at what they would appraise it in payment of a just debt.

On the whole the present method of assessing values, barring the fact that personal property does not pay its share of the taxes, is better than that of our fathers, unless assessors in other parts of the State were as conscientious as were Messrs. King and Corwin.

From a Methodist Minister.

CLARKSON, N. Y., Nov. 1892.—"I have used Gilmore's Aromatic Wine in my family, and for a debilitated system there is nothing to equal it in restoring vigor and strength, and for female weakness it stands without a rival. I most heartily recommend it to all who may be suffering from chronic malaria or biliousness."—Rev. E. J. Whitney. All druggists sell Gilmore's Aromatic Wine at $1 00 per bottle.

Drs. Jones and Potter, 1270 Broadway:

DEAR SIRS: You can imagine my great satisfaction in being so completely cured of my rupture after suffering with it for thirty-eight years. I have been examined by many eminent doctors and had their trusses adjusted, but grew worse every year. By chance I came into your care, and am now a sound man.

I feel truly grateful to you, and cheerfully recommend your treatment

WORKING WOMEN.

THEIR HARD STRUGGLE

Made Easier by the Timely Intervention of One Woman.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

All women work. Some in their homes, some in church, and some in the whirl of society. Many in stores, mills, and shops, tens of thousands are on the never ceasing treadmill earning their daily food.

All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbance; and the nature of their duties in many cases quickly drifts them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints—ovarian troubles, inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement of the womb, leucorrhœa, or perhaps irregularity or suppression of "monthly periods"—causing severe backache, nervousness, irritability and lassitude.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing cure for all these troubles. It strengthens the proper muscles and displacement with all its horrors will no more crush you.

Backache, dizziness, fainting, bearing down, disordered stomach, moodiness, dislike of friends and society—all symptoms of the one cause—will be quickly dispelled, and you will again be free Accept the truth.

You can tell the story of your pain to a woman, and get the help that only a woman can give. Her address is, Lydia E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.
